Message from the Editor

Your Insurance Industry Feeds
150,000+ Kids

Dear Jack,

Here is something about which you can be proud: US insurance organizations and their charitable foundations have donated over $220 million in response to the COVID-19 crisis, according to data gathered by the Insurance Industry Charitable Foundation (IICF).

As you know, there is still great need in our communities for additional help, and the IICF has launched a national industrywide fundraising campaign to benefit vulnerable children through a united effort. Funds raised through the "COVID-19 Crisis: IICF Children's Relief Fund" will help support children at risk of food insecurity, educational disruption, family homelessness, and other circumstances exacerbated by the crisis.

To date, IICF has raised $1.1 million for this cause with donations from over 400 individuals and companies, including a $500,000 donation from Lloyd's! The grants it has so far given have provided over 150,000 meals, and many thousands more will be coming soon. I'm asking you to join with us to reach the goal and help many more children in need. No amount is too small as insurance professionals nationwide band together to help others through this crisis. You can even select the region of the country to benefit from your donation. Please contribute here.

Participation in the IRMI certification programs was up almost 20 percent in April and May, as many risk professionals decided to spend time on professional development while they were working from home. Because they are completely online, the five IRMI programs are a convenient means for increasing your knowledge and credibility. Insurance CE credit is also available in most states. Why not use your extra time to elevate your career potential? Learn more or enroll in an IRMI certification program today.

Thank you for the trust you place in IRMI when you rely on the information and education resources we offer. Be careful and stay well.

All the best,

Jack

Jack Gibson, CPCU, CRIS, ARM
President & CEO | IRMI
CEO | WebCE